

Old WW2 Gasifier photo taken from a video on a production line.

During WW2 there was a fuel shortage across Europe and countries needed fuel to continue to function so they turned to wood gas as a fuel. The photo is a still that I captured from a very old black and white educational film that was recorded in Sweden during WW2 covering the wood gasifier in production on an assembly line. They displayed a cut away for a few seconds and I took advantage of the video and captured this for a still. I tried to label everything on the unit that I could identify. Maybe this will help some of you out there that are interested in this technology and are considering building one yourself
